

NCNW

BETHUNE-HEIGHT CHANGEMAKER PATHWAYS

NCNW

ALEXANDRIA JONES

Alexandria Jones hails from Mount Vernon, NY—a proud junior, studying biology and bioinformatics, at the first degree granting HBCU, Lincoln University of Pennsylvania.

This school year, Alexandria will serve as Health Equity Program Committee Leader for the Lincoln section of NCNW with the goal of addressing health disparities. She intends to lead efforts to advocate for health equity policies by engaging with policymakers, raising awareness about the importance of equitable healthcare, and hosting fundraising events to give back to those in need. Additionally, Alexandria chartered the Lincoln section of the National Society of Black Women in Medicine and serves as president. She is also an active member in her community off campus, serving as a mentor to her high school cheerleading team—affording students academic and personal support, while fostering leadership and team spirit.

As an aspiring reproductive endocrinologist, Alexandria will dedicate her career to reducing health disparities and improving the quality of care for minority women. More specifically, she will attend medical school and ultimately establish a private practice of Black doulas, midwives, and OB-GYNs to provide affordable specialized care to individuals and couples, to help them achieve their dreams of starting a family.

Alexandria is, a NCNW Bethune-Height rising changemaker!